

JEAN ELIOT WRITES OF SOUTHERN BALL

Description of Brilliant Function at Pan-American Union Building.

PURPOSE A PLEASANT ONE

Presence of President and Mrs. Wilson Lends Fillip of Interest to Party.

In the first place the purpose behind the Southern Society's reception and ball last evening for the diplomatic representatives of South and Central American countries was a pleasant one—to entertain these distinguished visitors in a friendly fashion quite free from any hint of politics or commercial intercourse.

There was the presence of the President and Mrs. Wilson, honorary members of the society, to give a decided fillip of interest to the function. Moreover, the Pan-American Union building, with its great hall of the Americas, its severely beautiful entrance, and its twin marble stairways enclosing the patio filled with gay tropical foliage and its central gem, Mrs. Payne Whitney's Aztec fountain, is the one perfect place in Washington for the giving of brilliant semi-public balls and receptions.

Distinguished Company.

The great rooms were thronged with a distinguished assemblage of guests, diplomats, official folk, and notables of Washington society, the women splendidly gowned with jewels in their hair and at their throats. And for appealing contrast, the guests were seen in the recesses of the fast disappearing "old school" and dainty little ladies in quaint costumes, their shoulders covered by shawls or rare old family lace.

Many a treasured heirloom or bit of antique jewelry was brought out of its bed of cotton for the occasion, and without doubt the company included more than one Southern grande dame who makes her one excursion into the great world of Washington on the occasion of the Southern Society's annual hospitality.

Most Thrilling Moment.

Of course, the arrival of the President and Mrs. Wilson and their party—Miss Margaret Wilson, Miss Helen Woodrow, Mrs. J. B. Wilson, Mr. Bolling, Miss Bertha Bolling, Miss Edith Benham, John Randolph Bolling, Col. W. W. Harris, Commander Robert Berry and Lieut. Edwin M. Watson—was the most thrilling moment of the evening. They were escorted to the directors' rooms, where they greeted the assembled diplomats, the guests of honor and held reception on a small scale.

The Secretary of State and Mrs. Lansing, the Secretary of the Treasury and Mrs. McAdoo, the Counselor of the State Department and Mrs. Frank L. Polk, the Third Assistant Secretary of State and Mrs. William Phillips, and Richard Crane, 3d, secretary to Mr. Lansing, were in the "hot" group of notables who met the President and Mrs. Wilson and the diplomatic representatives informally and entered the great ball room in their wake.

Special Supper.

They were also guests at the special supper served for the President and Mrs. Wilson, the members of their party, and the diplomats in the Columbus room.

Among the other guests who enjoyed this special dinner were the President of the society, C. C. Tamm; the Secretary of the Navy and Mrs. Daniels, Mr. and Mrs. Robert W. Woolley, and Miss Mary Curtis Lee, daughter of Gen. Robert E. Lee, all of whom were in the receiving line; Mrs. William L. Marshall, Mrs. J. B. Borden Harriman, and the members of the President's escort committee. Supper and a delicious supper was served below stairs for the rest of the guests.

After the Presidential party entered the ball room until some one had the courage to start the dancing, the President and his party, who occupied an improvised box, with the Secretary of State and Mrs. Lansing, the Brazilian Ambassador and Mme. da Gama, the Argentine Ambassador and Mme. Naon, and a number of other diplomats, were the observed of all observers. There were moments when I did not envy them.

Ball in Full Swing.

However, the dancing soon broke through all formality, and ere long the ball was in full swing. Secretary and Mrs. McAdoo, Miss Rones, Miss Wilson, in a robin's egg blue gown and wearing the bandage in her hair which she affects so much this season; Dr. and Mrs. Grayson, Mr. Harriman, Mrs. Ruth Hilditch, Miss Francis Traver, Miss Margaret McChord, Miss Margaret Howard were among those who joined in the dancing.

Terrace a Favorite.

The terrace connecting the two stairways and opening into the Hall of the Americas seemed to be a spot favored by some of the dancers who found the ball room too crowded. Of course, the red-carpeted Marine Band furnished the music.

Mrs. Wilson was quite charming in a pale gray gown of tulle and satin, with a black sash in her hair and a great gray feather fan, which she uses most gracefully. Her costume contrasted strikingly with the blue gowns worn by Mme. da Gama and Mme. Naon, and Mrs. Lansing's coral colored tulle and velvet frock as they were grouped together.

Hundreds of People.

Some names? Why, I saw hundreds of people I knew. Senator and Mrs. Allen Pomeroy, Senator and Mrs. Claude Swanson, Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Hugh L. Scott and Miss Blanchard Scott, Mr. and Mrs. Victor Kaufmann and Mrs. W. W. Harris, Mr. and Mrs. Hampton Gary—Mrs. Gary lovely as
